Job Opportunity

Development Manager

Your next job should be about more than just aligning your skills with a job description. It should be about finding a company that values your workstyle, career goals and personal interests. That's why Mission Group has created a collaborative work environment and exceptional culture that supports, incentivizes and rewards its employees.

In addition to competitive pay and benefits, Mission Groupers enjoy paid training and development, open vacation, a company-paid cell phone, teambuilding trips, employee discounts, etc. Employees can also support the charity of their choice by volunteering up to one day per month on company time.

The Role:

Reporting to the VP of Development, you will be responsible for driving residential and mixed-use projects from acquisition through to occupancy. Working collaboratively with in-house construction and other internal and external teams, you will take part in all facets of the development cycle, with a primary focus on due diligence, design development, consultant coordination and municipal approvals.

Key tasks include:

- Managing consultant teams through the design process and municipal approvals
- Championing the project vision in driving overall value and ensuring projects are delivered on time and on budget
- Acting as a key ambassador for Mission Group by developing and maintaining strong relationships with stakeholders and industry professionals as well as leading public consultation and stakeholder engagement
- Assisting in the evaluation of potential projects, including site feasibility, concept design, proforma and budgets
- Maintaining ownership of assigned projects through the marketing, sales, construction and customer care phases, upholding Mission Group values and design intent

The Candidate:

You are service-oriented, quality obsessed, and driven by values. You are a strategic thinker with a proven ability to lead, inspire and influence others. You have a degree and at least 5 years of experience in a Development Manager role. Although not essential, if you have an MBA you'll have an edge. Your written and verbal communication skills and your meticulous attention to detail are a given. You are proficient in MS Office as well as various other industry software programs and communication tools.
